

To Whom it may concern,

I've known and worked alongside Kate Mulligan for 6 years, having collaborated with her on many creative challenges. In that time I have experienced an abundance of her natural abilities and skills which lend themselves to creativity in the realms of both communications, and design problem solving.

Leading this list would be her vision for interactive internet collaborations – in particular the Kidsinit web community which, among other accomplishments, was instrumental in bringing the graphic designs of my students at the San Francisco Academy of Art College for review to NASA Headquarters. The chosen image is now being considered for representing the International Space Station's corporate identity.

Following that, is Kate's determination and the energy she expresses in her work. It is these qualities that I have found most engaging, as she is never without an intelligent and intuitive guiding thought to inspire.

Sincerely,

Christine George
